Headline:

Showers this morning with thunder likely, drier later.

Today:

A cloudy morning with showers turning heavy, and potentially thundery at times. Turning drier later in the afternoon as showers thin-out and sunny spells become more widespread. Feeling warm in the sunshine. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Tonight:

Any daytime showers gradually easing into the evening, with some late spells of sunshine. Mostly dry overnight with long clear spells and the odd shower remains possible. Minimum temperature 12 deg C (54 deg F).

Thursday:

Any early cloud or fog will soon clear through the morning, with sunny spells and scattered showers to follow. Showers ease during the afternoon with long clear spells for most. Maximum temperature 21 deg C (70 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:

Another day of scattered showers and sunny spells on Friday. Showery rain potentially heavy on Saturday. Some heavy and possibly thundery showers again on Sunday. Rather cool throughout.
